

“While I’ve enjoyed it all, I really value the relationships I can make through primary care, and how I can see the impact on seniors’ health, well-being and independence.”

About Robert N. Miller Jr., MD

Dr. Robert Miller was in high school when he first became interested in healthcare. Before pursuing a career in it, he served as a Navy submarine commander and officer, for which he was awarded much recognition. Since he transitioned to medicine, Dr. Miller has cared for patients through the Navy, Marines and many medical centers. “While I’ve enjoyed it all, I really value the relationships I can make through primary care,” he says, “and how I can see the impact on seniors’ health, well-being and independence.”

In his spare time, Dr. Miller plays golf any chance he gets. He and his wife love going to sporting events and traveling the world. They’re also proud parents to their son who’s a recent college graduate.
