

“I enjoy building strong, trusting relationships with my senior patients. As we work together, I like to educate them on healthy lifestyles and preventing illness.”

About David Duong, MD, MSEE

As a child, Dr. David Duong saw many people wounded or killed during the Vietnam War, and it made him want to become a doctor. While he pursued an engineering path first, Dr. Duong did ultimately become a board-certified internal medicine physician and has cared for patients of all ages over the years. “I enjoy building strong, trusting relationships with my senior patients,” he says. “As we work together, I like to educate them on healthy lifestyles and preventing illness.”

When he’s not providing compassionate care, Dr. Duong keeps up with medical research, reading literature, church activities, and his children who are currently in college. He also loves international travel, and his favorite destination so far has been Vatican City.
