

“Making a difference in people's lives was a primary motivator in my career choice to become a physician.”

About Nishi Agarwal, MD

Dr. Nishi Agarwal explains that making a difference in people’s lives was “a primary motivator in my career choice to become a physician.” She loves building trusting relationships with her patients. “I first like to spend time with them, listen to them, and understand where they are coming from, and then address any medical problems they might have and try to understand if there is an underlying social component to it,” she explains. She is passionate about preventative care and hopes to guide patients to live healthy lives. “I care about their well-being,” she says.

In her free time, Dr. Agarwal enjoys meditating, practicing yoga, and gardening. She also likes traveling, reading, and cooking.
