About Charanpreet Khangura, DO

Dr. Charanpreet Khangura, who was diagnosed with leukemia at only eight years old, was inspired by the physicians who cared for her. “In medical school and residency, I found that I enjoyed making connections with patients, and together, helping improve their health and lives,” she explains. She is passionate about preventative care and loves collaborating with patients. “I build relationships and bonds with patients by taking the time to listen to what is important to them, getting to know them on a personal level, and building trust,” she says. During appointments, she wants patients to feel heard and unrushed.

Dr. Khangura loves spending time with her family and traveling in her free time. She also likes baking and cooking.
