

“Giving someone more time with their family and getting some semblance of their former life has always been a passion.”

About Jaggers Keene, MD

Dr. Jaggers Kenne’s interest in medicine began in high school. He “loves direct patient care” and strives to “treat them like family.” He explains, “If they need me, they can call me. This is my purpose, this is what I am here to be and do.” He likes listening to his patients’ needs and problem-solving. “I always thought it was fun to dive into any and all problems to put the pieces together,” he says. He especially enjoys caring for the senior population. “Giving someone more time with their family and getting some semblance of their former life has always been a passion,” he says.

Dr. Keene loves staying active in his free time. He enjoys working out, scuba diving, and snow skiing. He also likes building motorcycles and hot rods.
