“Spending time listening to patients and understanding their needs can have a big impact on their lives, even if it is just a small change.”

About Apple Walton, APRN, FNP-C

Apple Walton says that her desire to work in healthcare began when she was “young and living in the Philippines.” She explains, “Growing up with limited medical resources, I learned to work hard and be creative on things to make things work.” She is an advocate of preventative care and always listens to her patients’ concerns. “Spending time listening to patients and understanding their needs can have a big impact on their lives, even if it is just a small change,” she explains. She holds the senior population in high regard and loves the opportunity to care for them.

Apple Walton can be found solving puzzles with her husband and daughters in her free time. She also enjoys reading manga and watching anime.
