“Addressing any fears or concerns and offering words of encouragement and support.”

About Rameni Rahim, MSN, APRN, FNP-C

Prior to becoming a nurse practitioner, Rameni Rahim was a nurse for several years. She finds it incredibly rewarding to help family, friends, and patients navigate the complexities of the healthcare system. She values her long-lasting relationships with patients, which she fosters by “addressing any fears or concerns and offering words of encouragement and support.” She encourages patients to be engaged in their health and well-being. “Building trust is critical,” she says.

Spending quality time with family is Rameni Rahim’s favorite way to spend her free time. She also enjoys traveling, gardening, and worldly music. She shares that in her younger years, she attended school in a Dutch-speaking country.
