“I believe that building strong relationships with patients starts with genuine empathy and treating each individual as if they were a member of my own family.”

About Orlando Antonio Pinero Briceno, MD

Dr. Orlando Pinero explains that the physicians who cared for his father during his battle with cancer “left a lasting impression” and inspired him to become a physician. He strives to create a “partnership” with patients by listening to their goals and concerns. He explains, “I believe that building strong relationships with patients starts with genuine empathy and treating each individual as if they were a member of my own family.” He adds, “Making a difference in my patients’ lives goes beyond improving their medical conditions—it’s about enhancing their overall well-being.”

Dr. Pinero loves spending his free time with his wife and daughter. He is also a professional musician, playing the viola and bass.
