“Each patient comes with their own stories and concerns, and my approach to their healthcare is not a ‘one size fits all’ approach but one that is specialized to their unique situations.”

About Lori Knight, FNP

After a severe equestrian accident left Lori Knight with a fractured pelvis, she contemplated how to combine her “core values of faith, love, compassion, humility, integrity, and respect,” which led her to nursing. “It was the best decision I could have ever made, even though it was discovered in the most unusual circumstance,” she says. She believes in treating patients “holistically,” explaining, “Each patient comes with their own stories and concerns, and my approach to their healthcare is not a ‘one size fits all’ approach but one that is specialized to their unique situations.”

Lori enjoys watching sports, especially her sons’ games, in her free time. She also holds multiple national equestrian champion titles.
