“I believe the best care happens when patients feel comfortable asking questions and participating in decisions about their health”

About Andy Goberdhan, M.D.

Dr. Andy Goberdhan has “always been fascinated” by the medical field. “I saw how much trust patients place in their physicians, especially during vulnerable moments. That responsibility shaped my commitment to practicing medicine with compassion, clarity, and integrity,” he explains. “I believe the best care happens when patients feel comfortable asking questions and participating in decisions about their health,” he says. He prioritizes “prevention, early intervention, and coordination of care,” including “coordinating with specialists, helping patients understand their treatment plans, or connecting them with community resources.”

When not with patients, Dr. Goberdhan loves cooking, staying active, and enjoying quality time with family.
