“The physician-patient relationship is sacred, and it's a privilege to be a part of someone's life in the way I can be as a physician.”

About Divya Nallapuram, MD

Dr. Divya Nallapuram was drawn to medicine by a desire to help people at their most vulnerable. "It's a privilege to be able to help patients pursue more good days — time spent doing things they love or with their family and friends," she says. Her perspective was further shaped by a deeply personal experience helping her own parents navigate their healthcare as they aged, which strengthened her commitment to helping seniors manage their health and improve their quality of life. “I think this not only has an effect on the patient's overall health outcomes and well-being but keeps them out of the ER and hospital — providing them with more good days at home doing the things they enjoy," she says.

She treats every patient with kindness and empathy and values a collaborative approach that aligns treatment plans with each patient's personal goals and values. "I understand that each patient is unique," she says. "The physician-patient relationship is sacred, and it's a privilege to be a part of someone's life in the way I can be as a physician."

When not with patients, Dr. Nallapuram enjoys spending time with friends and family, reading, walking in nature, traveling, attending concerts and festivals, and exploring a variety of cuisines as a self-described foodie.
