“They deserve the love and passion that organizations such as ChenMed offer.”

About Richard Curren, DO

Richard Curren, DO answered a calling later in life — one driven by a deep desire to bring positive change to others. "Because of this, I went to medical school shortly after turning 30," he says. He was drawn to the senior population because they are an underheard voice in healthcare. "They deserve the love and passion that organizations such as ChenMed offer," he says. Dr. Curren builds strong relationships by taking a genuine interest in his patients' personal lives — their hobbies, their families, and their stories. By truly understanding his patients' backgrounds and daily lives, he is better equipped to help them recognize when to seek care before a situation escalates. "I want to help them have more good days," he says.

When not with patients, Dr. Curren enjoys going on cruises and making memories with his family.
