“I hope to help our communities transform, one individual at a time.”

About Todd Wise, MD

Dr. Todd Wise has worn many hats throughout his career — and the roles he's loved most have always shared the same thread: working with people, learning something new, and seeing meaningful changes over time. He initially planned to pursue emergency medicine but discovered a deeper passion in longitudinal care and the relationships it builds. "Working with seniors is the best way to pursue my professional passions," he says. "I get to work with people longitudinally, solving new problems as they emerge and seeing the impact of our work together over time."

A former high school teacher, Dr. Wise brings a gift for communication to his practice — finding common ground with patients and making complex medical concepts clear and accessible. He is deeply committed to empowering his patients to become the best version of themselves. "People overestimate what they can do in a year but underestimate what they can do in a decade," he says. "I hope to help our communities transform, one individual at a time."

When not with patients, Dr. Wise channels his love of creation and challenge into music — playing piano, guitar, and woodwinds — as well as gardening, cooking, and pushing his physical limits through marathons and half-ironman triathlons.
