Kubra Demiroz, DPM

“When patients feel heard, respected, and supported, they are more likely to engage in their care and achieve better health outcomes.”

About Kubra Demiroz, DPM

Dr. Kubra Demiroz was inspired to pursue podiatric medicine by a deeply personal experience — watching her grandmother undergo a below-knee amputation due to diabetic complications. That experience ignited a passion for limb preservation and compassionate care for older adults. "As a podiatrist, I have the opportunity to restore mobility, relieve pain, and help patients maintain their independence — something I find incredibly rewarding," she says.

Dr. Demiroz builds relationships through active listening, trust, and clear communication. She takes time to understand each patient as a whole person, explains medical information in a simple and straightforward way, and involves patients — and their families when appropriate — in every care decision. "When patients feel heard, respected, and supported, they are more likely to engage in their care and achieve better health outcomes," she says. Her goal is not only to treat conditions but to improve her patients' overall quality of life.

When not with patients, Dr. Demiroz enjoys spending time with family and friends, traveling, experiencing new cultures, and staying active through daily exercise.
