About Omar Rosa-Lopez, MSN, FNP

Omar Rosa-Lopez became a nurse practitioner to make a meaningful difference in people's lives through compassionate, personalized care. His background in nursing, quality improvement, and population health has deepened his commitment to preventing illness and helping patients live well. He especially enjoys caring for seniors because of the relationships they build and the life experiences they share. "Helping them maintain their independence, dignity, and time with loved ones gives my work purpose," he says.

Omar builds trust by listening without judgment, learning what matters most to each patient, and following through on his commitments. His background in quality and population health allows him to identify gaps in care and address barriers that might otherwise go unnoticed. "Meaningful impact means helping someone stay independent, enjoy everyday activities, and spend more healthy days with the people they love," he says. Omar values clear communication and respect for each patient's culture and beliefs — working together to create a care plan that fits their goals and daily life.

When not with patients, Omar enjoys spending time with his wife and children, making memories together, and exploring new technology and opportunities for personal growth.
